The Secret of Happiness

Although Christianity is considered a separate religion to Judaism in the minds of most people, it is, in fact, the completion and perfection of Judaism: all of the promises made to Abraham, Moses and the prophets came to fulfilment in Jesus Christ the Son of God. (Hebrews 1: 1-2)) Indeed, to be a disciple of Jesus engages the gentile (non jew) to observe the 10 commandments, which are summed up in the command Jesus gave to love; but with a love of a particular kind, 'love one another as I have loved you'. (Jn 13; 34) Love of this kind is impossible unless God himself dwells within the soul through the grace of Baptism which is why Jesus makes Baptism a universal pre-requisite to salvation, 'go and teach all nations baptising them in the name of the Father and of the Son and the Holy Spirit'. (Mt 28: 19-20)) Indeed to be a disciple means to take on the attitude and perspective of Jesus Himself: it's only then that we can love like Him, and it's in obedience to his command to love that produces happiness in the soul.

Jesus, when teaching the way of discipleship gave us the beatitudes which present the necessary predispositions of those called to discipleship - in other words those called to love after the example that Jesus, a love that produces beatitude i.e. true happiness.

The Beatitudes, therefore, apply to all of us. And so whether rich or poor, when we hear Jesus say 'Blessed are the poor in spirit for theirs is the kingdom of heaven', we understand that, as disciples, we are detached from earthly wealth as not to make what we can buy and accumulate the centre of our lives, and rather, to put the nurture of faith and the performance of goodness at the heart of our existence. That interior freedom to do good with the wealth we have produces happiness. Similarly, 'blessed are those who mourn for they shall be comforted'; in other words happy will you be if your consolation when suffering comes from God, because it certainly does not come from the spirit of the world which lets us down time and time again. Interior freedom to love is what lies behind the beatitudes, and so freedom from attachment or longing for worldly power and influence is what lies behind the beatitude 'blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth'. By being detached from the ego, which seeks to exert itself over and against the other, we practise meekness, and allow God to be the power for good flowing through us to the lives of others in a spirit of service. To be persecuted and considered happy at the same time may seem like a paradox, but actually the spirit of this world and the spirit of God are by nature at enmity with each other, and so to be persecuted in the cause of right, that is, for the sake of love in the performance of goodness can draw criticism and condemnation. This even happens in the church when a soul decides on doing some good, they are criticised and undermined by those who seek power and attention for themselves - who do they think they are? Is the common complaint against those who are persecuted in the cause of right.

St. Thomas Aquinas said, if you want the most perfect exemplification of the Beatitudes look to Christ crucified. If we want to be happy, we must renounce what Jesus despised on the cross and love what Jesus loved on the cross.

Wealth, worldly pleasure, earthly power and honour, the things in which we typically seek our joy, are renounced by Christ on the cross. Instead, like Jesus, let us love what Jesus loved; that is, to do the will of His Father. (Jn 14: 15-24). Only in obedience to the Word of God can we carry out the command to love which produces exquisite joy, peace and lasting happiness, not as the world gives it, but only as God can give. (Jn 14:27) Jesus Crucified, who alone mends the breach between God and ourselves, is the true peacemaker, and who alone grants happiness to those who keep His Word.

Fr Matthew Donnelly
